

ⓘ BETA > BUSINESS > SPORTSMONEY

Real Madrid Legend Toni Kroos Reveals Coaching Plans

Tom Sanderson Senior Contributor ⓘ

Tom Sanderson is a Barcelona-based writer who covers Spanish football.

Follow

Nov 8, 2024, 04:58am EST

Updated Nov 8, 2024, 05:19am EST

Huge Sales Are Happening

Our Editors Found The Best Deals.

Shop Now

During an interview with Forbes, Real Madrid legend Toni Kroos once more reiterated that he has no immediate plans to go into coaching following his retirement from playing professional soccer earlier this year.

Kroos shocked the world by announcing that he would hang up his boots following Germany's unsuccessful quest to win the Euros on home soil.

📘 BETA

Led by FC Barcelona's Lamine Yamal, Kroos' adopted homeland Spain went all the way to the final in Berlin, and beat back-to-back runners-up England 2-1 to clinch a record fourth crown after eliminating Germany from the quarterfinals.

Kroos walked away from the game at the height of his powers aged 34, and while he was unable to achieve a fairytale ending with his country, he certainly sealed one at Madrid where he helped to record-extending 15th and 36th Champions League and La Liga crowns either side of an emotional farewell at the Bernabeu.

Kroos is currently enjoying time with his family, and has started his own equivalent to the Kings League while also setting up an academy for youngsters in the Spanish capital.

More than busy with these matters, he once again reinforced the message that he has no immediate plans to go into coaching when the topic of manning the dugout in the near future was raised in an interview with Focus.

"Not at the moment," Kroos stated. "Of course, I can't say if things will be any different ten years from now. But I don't want to quickly go back to a rhythm that I consciously left behind: being busy from morning to night,

.. - - - - -

Huge Sales Are Happening

Our Editors Found The Best Deals.

Shop Now

Black Friday Sale

By Jordan Thomas Forbes Staff

The 50 Best Black Friday Deals So Far, According To Our Deals Editors

 BETA a Cuzzone Forbes Staff

Despite this, Kroos isn't ruling out management one day. "I think I would contribute something to the work of coaching," he said.

Above all, the midfielder whose presence Madrid clearly misses in the center of the park believes he made the right decision.

"I don't regret having retired," Kroos remarked, ahead of shedding light on his plans as per living arrangements.

"The plan for the coming years is very clear: our main residence is and will continue to be Madrid. But there will always be some phases of the year, during the summer holidays or sometimes around Christmas, when we are in Germany," he explained.

Tom Sanderson

Follow

Tom Sanderson is a Barcelona-based reporter who covers Spanish football and in particular its two biggest... Read More

Editorial Standards

Forbes Accolades

One Community. Many Voices. Create a free account to share your thoughts. Read our community guidelines here.